BRIEF LIFE

For every action there is a reason
Just as surely as season follows season
So we search and seek an explanation
For what seems such a pointless action.

Quietly, easily, and without ado
She comes to bless the lives of two
Who love her with such adoration
Their joy is open to the nation.

Day by day, and as time goes
She blossoms like an unblemished rose
Days to weeks, a month, and more
She is sheer perfection to love and adore.

Her life gave joy to all who saw
But in days numbered just thirty-four
And then for reasons medicine can't explain
God claimed this precious life again.

With grief and pain just unrestrained
We saw this precious life reclaimed
And despite our tears and recrimination
There is no logical physical explanation.

There must be a reason and some purpose
Why such sweetness and innocence did leave us
Must we all pass through human maternity
To fit our lives for a future in eternity?

So Lisa our darling, now and for evermore
Your free soul in time and space can soar
We've had our misery and pleasure and pain
But your sweet BRIEF LIFE is forever our gain.

Lionel F. Dale.
